Great Ranges

Of 20 models tested, these six are our very best bets

EASY BAKING OVENS
Reheat more than you cook? Choose a dual-oven range with the smaller one on top to minimize bending

Overall Winner (Gas)
LG DOUBLE OVEN RANGE
LDG3036ST ($1,800)

An extra-easy-to-use gas range, plus a double oven, makes this our champ. Tons of features, including griddle burner; warm, pizza, and bread-proofing options; and convection—it even remembers your favorite cooking settings.

Good to Know

A HIGHER PRICE TAG DIDN'T ALWAYS MEAN SUPERIOR OR FASTER PERFORMANCE

Value Buy (Gas) WHIRLPOOL

Gas Range with Convection
WFG720HoAS ($1,349)

Lots to love: warming drawer, center burner; converts temps to convection equivalent. One con: no traditional self-cleaning.

Luxury (Gas) VIKING PROFESSIONAL

Freestanding Gas
VGSC5304B ($6,000)

Bested the rest for pro-caliber cooking. Boiled fast, broiled to perfection, and baked brilliantly, even without using convection.

Best High-Tech (Induction) KENMORE ELITE

Electric Induction Range
95073 ($1,800)

Serious speed (due to induction cooking), baking, and self-cleaning. (Note: requires special cookware.)

Overall Winner (Electric) FRIGIDAIRE

Electric Range FGEF308TNF
($2,000)

Good for entertaining or weekday dinners—two equal ovens offer major flexibility. Baked well, but the broiler could've been better.

TASTY TEST
We baked 1,845 chocolate chip cookies and 78 layer cakes in evaluations

Value Buy (Electric) GE

Double Oven Electric Range
JB850SFSS ($1,400)

Ranked easiest electric range to use, thanks to its controls. Speedy boiling, and two ovens at this price is impressive.

How We Tested

➔ We timed how long it took for water to boil, checked how evenly the burners heated and the ovens baked cakes and cookies, and looked at how well broilers browned steak and toasted bread. Also assessed: manuals, controls, handles, oven visibility, cleanup, and surface temps.
